Rye Whiskey Release During First Year in Business

SYCAMORE, Ill.— Sept. 16, 2025— If Prohibition had not happened, would rye whiskey be America's favorite whiskey over Bourbon? I guess we'll never know.

Some distilleries like to make waves in tradition like your local business, Windows Distillery. Not yet a year old and Windows Distillery has released their sixth and seventh products, their long awaited rye whiskeys are finally here.

Within its first year of being in business, Windows Distillery, a local business, added rye whiskeys to their portfolio. Big Ambur and Smoky Ambur are composed of 9, 8, and 6 year old whiskeys aged to perfection in South American casks, set out in stores and local bars September 19th.

When honoring the tradition of American whiskey you can't forget about rye whiskey. Rye used to be the preferred whiskey before prohibition so what better way to support American craftsman style than with a rye whiskey.

This local business wants to be one of the biggest names in Whiskey, so let's help them get there with our strong small town support. Owner and CEO Chris Mayer says, "We want to be big, so we're going big by honoring American made."

Windows Distillery leads innovation in the liquor world with focus on craftsmanship and a mission to honor American tradition. Founded in 2024, Windows Distillery has a unique lineup of liquor with 7 products selling worldwide. For more information you can visit Windowsdistillery.com
